

A Selection of Core Readings on Counterintelligence & Deception (With Emphasis on the Soviet Union & Russia – and a Tad on Islam)

By Dr. John J. Dziak

January 2010

A. Counterintelligence

B. Deception

Donald C. Daniel & Katherine Herbig. Strategic Military Deception. NY: Pergamon Press, 1982

Dr. Dziak is co-founder and President of Dziak Group, Inc., and Dziak Associates, Inc., consulting firms in the fields of technology transfer, intelligence, counterintelligence and security, and national security affairs. His clients are found in industry, the Intelligence Community, the Department of Defense, and the Department of Homeland Security. Dr. Dziak is also a Senior Fellow at the International Assessment & Strategy Center where he works on counterintelligence, terrorism and strategic deception issues. He is also a consultant to the National Intelligence Council, serves as an Adjunct Professor at the National Defense Intelligence College, and is an Adjunct Professor with the Defense Security Studies Program of Missouri State University (Vienna, VA. campus). He has served well over four decades as a company President and as a senior intelligence officer (SES-4) and executive in the Office of the Secretary of Defense and in the Defense Intelligence Agency, with long experience in weapons proliferation intelligence, counterintelligence, strategic intelligence, and intelligence education. Dr. Dziak received his honors Ph.D. from Georgetown University, is a graduate of the National War College, and is a recipient of numerous defense and intelligence awards and citations. Dr. Dziak was the co-developer and first director of the Masters Degree Program at the Defense Intelligence School, the original predecessor to the current National Defense Intelligence College. He also currently lectures at the Institute of World Politics; has taught at the National War College, Georgetown and George Washington Universities; and lectures on intelligence and foreign affairs throughout the US and abroad. He is the author of the award-winning, Chekisty: A History of the KGB, numerous other books, articles, and monographs, the most recent of which is The Military Relationship Between China and Russia, and is currently preparing a book on counterintelligence, as well as other works on Russian deception, and radical Islam.